Dear Members of the NYCPM Community,

Research and publications within the medical and scientific community are an indelible mark for all time to come, not only for the individual making them but equally important for the academic institution they hail from.

The New York College of Podiatric Medicine is extremely proud of contributions made by its faculty to the medical literature and knowledge base, and properly wishes to acknowledge them at this Awards Ceremony.

Your endeavor not only instructs, mentors, and provides others with useful information, but demonstrates your passion and thirst to discover and report new and meaningful thoughts, concepts and facts to improve the human condition.

We proudly salute you with a great sense of pride and admiration.

I would also like to give special thanks to Thomas Walker and Paul Tremblay for compiling this year’s list.

With very best wishes,

Michael J. Trepal, DPM

Dear Colleagues,

The New York College of Podiatric Medicine is a community of teachers, practitioners, scholars, and students that exists not only to train outstanding doctors of podiatric medicine, but also, more broadly, to generate, transmit, and disseminate knowledge about the causes, prevention, and treatment of diseases and physical problems of the lower extremity, as well as knowledge about other subjects in areas that may be susceptible of learned or scientific inquiry by members of our faculty.

Society often tries to place other responsibilities upon an institution such as ours, including job creation, economic development, social reform, real estate development, and even political involvement. However, we must remain true to who we really are, and must not lose sight of our reason for being. We must continue to be a community of teachers and scholars highly focused on our Mission within the realm of podiatric medicine.

Clear and unmistakable evidence that we are fulfilling our Mission is the fact that our faculty has published an impressive body of articles and research papers in a wide range of peer-reviewed scientific journals and books. It is with great pride and pleasure that I bring to your attention the articles and papers in the following Faculty Bibliography. It is my hope that – in addition to providing you with food for thought, and with insights that may be helpful in your own work – the scope and range of subjects covered in the Faculty Bibliography will perhaps inspire further scholarship and research that will continue and advance the strong tradition of scholarly inquiry that exists among the faculty at the New York College of Podiatric Medicine.

Sincerely,

Louis L. Levine, M.A., L.H.D., C.S.W.

The library is honored to contribute towards the annual acknowledgement and celebration of scholarly writings through published research. An annual tradition since 1992, the Faculty Bibliography distinguishes professionals committed to promoting research and scholarship in their fields of expertise.

In December 2014 faculty, adjunct faculty, staff, and administration were requested to complete an online survey of published works. These papers had to meet certain criteria: peer-review journals, scientific papers, and scholarly communications such as posters and presentations given to conferences. The criteria also indicated that the author or authors clearly state NYCPM as their primary institution and that the published item/items had to be published between January and December 2014.

This year 45 sources produced by seventeen (17) NYCPM authors have submitted citations to the library. The list is organized alphabetically by the author’s last name. If multiple NYCPM authors published the same article, it is repeated throughout under different author’s names. Congratulations to all of our NYCPM authors!

Sincerely Yours,
