Faculty and Student Authors Celebrated; Bibliographies on Web for First Time

On consecutive Wednesdays in May, faculty and student authors were honored and feted with luncheons and presented with commemorative certificates; the printed bibliographies of their works, compiled by NYCPM librarians, were distributed on each occasion.

At the student celebration, Dr. Michael J. Trepal, DPM, VP of Academic Affairs and Dean, complimented the students on the skills they've gained by investigating and doing research, and noted that "bibliographies become markers of academia." President and CEO Louis L. Levine thanked the students for "moving us toward the knowledge of the 21st century."

Paul Tremblay, Chief Medical Librarian, reports that the library has gotten both the faculty and student bibliographies on the web, the first time he thinks that that has happened. Go to <http://www.nycpm.edu/library.asp>, scroll to the bottom of the page, and search under Other Resources. There are two separate links. In addition, the titles of articles are linked to their publishers (or to their PDF full-text when available). Congratulations all!
