Eight Canadian podiatric medical students from the Université du Québec à Trois-Rivières (U.Q.T.R.) recently completed a four-month clinical rotation at NYCPM’s clinical affiliate, Foot Center of New York, and at its affiliated hospitals. The clinical rotation, which has proven to be mutually beneficial to both institutions, is part of U.Q.T.R.’s program in podiatric medicine, which was founded in late 2003 through the efforts of an NYCPM graduate, Dr. François Allart, in cooperation with the faculty and administration at NYCPM. The U.Q.T.R. program is the first D.P.M. program in Canada, as well as the first French-speaking D.P.M. program in the world.
