Dean Lorich, MD, Operates on U2's Bono After Central Park Bike Crash

Dean Lorich, MD, a member of NYCPM's faculty in the Department of Academic Orthopedic Surgery, serves as an orthopedic trauma surgeon at the Hospital for Special Surgery, and in that capacity, he operated on U2 singer Bono, who suffered multiple injuries in a bike crash recently in Central Park. According to the NY Post, "Bono suffered significant injuries to his face, by his right eye, elbow, shoulder blade and hand," and has undergone several surgeries." Dr. Lorich is quoted as saying that "He will require intensive and progressive therapy, however a full recovery is expected." Dr Lorich will lecture to NYCPM students and faculty during the upcoming academic year.
