Foot Center of New York Steps Out with NHEMA

Future doctors of podiatric medicine spread the word about the importance of foot health care on June 20th at a mini-street fair beneath the Metro North tracks at 125th Street and Park Avenue sponsored by the New Harlem East Merchants Association (NHEMA). Representing the New York College of Podiatric Medicine (NYCPM) and its clinical teaching affiliate the Foot Center of New York (FCNY), the students distributed flyers and provided information about services to the community. NYCPM/FCNY are members of NHEMA, which has implemented a major East Harlem initiative for the current and future refurbishment of 125th Street east of 5th Avenue. Staffing the Foot Center of New York's table were, l. to r.: Gireesh Reddy, Brittany Mayer, Zakiyyah Waters, Juanita Ruffan, Victoria Vo, Rusheena Bartlett.
