

NYCPM
New York College of Podiatric Medicine

Simon M. Nzuzi, DPM ('79), Sends Thanks and Wishes to Colleagues and Students Upon His Retirement

After his retirement celebration on December 18, Simon M. Nzuzi, DPM ('79), sent this poetic thank you to the NYCPM Community:

Someone said a long time ago that Retirement is a time to look back with pride on achievements made and goals fulfilled...

A time to remember with appreciation the many special times and special people...

A time to celebrate the past with all its success and the future with all the future possibilities.

I owe my goals, joy, achievement and whatever amount of success I gained doing what I was trained to do, to you all.

You have taught and trained me to do the right thing and to go the extra mile in serving others, and most importantly, to Accept every human being as equal with the same rights.

My learning and training years are coming to an end in the new few days. As a graduate and podiatrist, I will take what I've learned physically, emotionally, mentally and spiritually through the years and in return, become ambassador of the NYCPM and FCNY to share the good news of the College and Clinic to the world's communities.

I can't thank the Administration enough for the opportunity given to me to serve; the faculty members for their teaching and training; students for their willingness to learn and acquire new knowledge, and skills to change their behavior; staff members of the College and Clinic for their support and love of what they do, which allowed all of us to perform well in teaching and the caring of our patients.

I am thankful and grateful to have had the opportunity to work closely with you all and I believe that you have what it takes to bring this institution into the 22nd century. Your devotion, determination and goodwill will continue to make the College and Clinic the best of its kind:

good organization, ideas united in a common goal, where everyone is part of the cause as a TEAM to win and succeed for all, together.

This has been and will continue to be my home.

Again thank you for making me who I have become and FOR THE WONDERFUL RETIREMENT PARTY.

SEASONS GREETING TO ALL

-- Dr. Simon Muaka Nzuzi

