

Jerry Seinfeld Continues Support of Biomechanics in Appreciation of Care by Joseph D'Amico, DPM

For the fourth year in a row, NYCPM has received a substantial contribution from comedian Jerry Seinfeld to be used to support the Dr. Richard O. Schuster Memorial Biomechanics Seminar and our Gait Laboratory for Biomechanics Research. Mr. Seinfeld's ongoing generosity is in appreciation for the outstanding care provided by Joseph D'Amico, DPM ('73), care that the comedian declares alleviated many years of suffering and completely changed his life.

Our utmost appreciation goes to Mr. Seinfeld as well as to Dr. D'Amico, Professor in our Department of Orthopedics, for directing the contributions to his alma mater. Dr. D'Amico, the seminar's originator, will be the scientific chair of this November's Biomechanics Seminar, to be held November 12, 2016. President Louis L. Levine and Vice President and Dean Michael J. Trepal, DPM, gratefully acknowledge the exceptional work of Dr. D'Amico in the field of biomechanics.
