

2022 Residency Fair Delivers Information and Success Stories

---

Information (and goodies) were dispensed at the Residency Fair.

On Friday July 22nd, NYCPM hosted a live Residency Fair, organized by Student Services: the first time in three years that the Fair was able to go live. Representatives from dozens of residency programs set up exhibits and literature that displayed their offerings. Tables filled the Bruce Frankel conference room, classrooms, and lined hallways; 2023 students crowded around them, eager for information. At each table, residents – some of them NYCPM graduates! – were the sources of both information and on-the-ground experience.

According to Academic Dean Michael J. Trepal, DPM, he and other faculty were “so happy to see recent (and not so recent) grads return. I heard success story after success story. Many have not been back to campus for a good number of years and positively opined on the changes they noted.” Dr. Trepal credited many at NYCPM with the success of this “remarkable” day. “None of the day’s events could have been possible without the planning and supervision of Dean Lisa Lee, who was assisted with incredible support by Courtney Cadle, Joanna Krawczyk and student volunteers,” he said. “We also need to thank Alex Sanchez and Wizz for all their assistance in helping to set up tables and rooms; IT for its support; our security officers, who facilitated parking and safety; and lastly, at the end of the day, Housekeeping staff, who were there to help clean.”

An end-of-day wine/cheese reception helped everyone relax and unwind.

2022 Residency Fair Delivers Information and Success Stories (Continued)

Loads of information and advice on hand in second-floor hallway . . .

. . . and in Bruce Frankel Conference Center.

Community Medical Center Clerkship & Residency Program was also in Bruce Frankel.

Lina Dobronevsky, DPM (2022), seated left, sharing information about Northwell Health.

Graduates Arthur Gudeon, DPM (1960) and Lina Dobronevsky, DPM (2022) at Residency Fair.

Alum Joseph Coppola, DPM (2020), resident physician at MetroWest Medical Center in Massachusetts, shares some information.